RURAL RESOURCE TEAM REPORT
FOR
RAWLIN'S COMMUNITY ASSESSMENT
CARBON COUNTY, WYOMING
SEPTEMBER 11-13, 2001

WRDC MISSION

"TO CREATE PARTNERSHIPS THAT RESULT IN EFFECTIVE, EFFICIENT AND TIMELY EFFORTS TO ENHANCE THE VIABILITY OF RURAL WYOMING."
September 11, 2001 is a day that will forever be remembered. As tragic events unfolded thousands of miles away from Rawlins, the assessment team arrived to listen to the community. We understand and appreciate that many people probably did not participate in the listening sessions because they wanted to spend precious time with family and friends. Perhaps now we all have a greater appreciation for the community in which we live. We would like to pay special tribute to those who did participate in an effort to make the community even stronger.
THE WYOMING RURAL DEVELOPMENT COUNCIL

The Wyoming Rural Development Council is a collaborative public/private partnership that brings together six partner groups: local/regional government, state government, federal government, tribal government, non-profit organizations and private sector individuals and organizations.

WRDC is governed by a Steering Committee representing the six partner groups. The Steering Committee as well as the Council membership has established the following goals for the WRDC:

- Assist rural communities in visioning and strategic planning
- Serve as a resource for assisting communities in finding and obtaining grants for rural projects
- Serve and be recognized as a neutral forum for identification and resolution of multi-jurisdictional issues
- Promote, through education, the understanding of the needs, values, and contributions of rural communities.

The Council seeks to assist rural Wyoming communities with their needs and development efforts by matching the technical and financial resources of federal, state, and local governments and the private sector with local development efforts.

PROCESS FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF THIS REPORT

The Wyoming Rural Development Council (WRDC) has provided a resource team to assist the town of Rawlins, Wyoming in evaluating the community's assets and liabilities and in developing suggestions for improving the environment, social and economic future of Rawlins.

The City of Rawlins requested a community assessment from the Wyoming Rural Development Council. Ron Kilgore served as the community contact and took the lead in agenda development, logistics and publicity in town for the assessment. Resource team members were selected to visit, interview citizens, business and community leaders, and develop a plan of recommended action for the town. The team members were carefully selected based on their fields of expertise that Rawlins officials indicated would be needed to respond to the problem areas identified.

The Resource Team toured the town and interviewed approximately 100 people over a three-day period from September 11-13, 2001. The team interviewed representatives from the following segments of the Rawlins community: banking, financial, economic development, business, industry, agriculture, law enforcement, corrections, youth, churches, minorities, education, parents, health care, social services, civic groups, seniors, and non-profits. Each participant was asked to respond to three questions designed to begin communication and discussion and to serve as a basis for developing the action plan. The three questions were:

- What do you think are the major problems and challenges in Rawlins?
- What do you think are the major strengths and assets in Rawlins?
- What projects would you like to see completed in two, five, ten and twenty years in Rawlins?

Upon completion of the interviews, the team met to compare notes and share comments following the three days of intense study. The team then agreed that each team member would carefully analyze what was said, synthesize what they heard with their knowledge of programs and resources, prepare their notes and suggestions, and forward these items to be combined into WRDC's final report to Rawlins.

The oral report was presented to the people of Rawlins on September 13, 2001 and many of the citizens of Rawlins who participated in the interviews were in attendance.

Following the oral report, a formal written report was prepared and presented to the City of Rawlins. It was agreed that the chamber would print copies or summaries for each person interviewed.
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The elements are all here for Rawlins to have a successful future. To become a growing, vibrant community takes only a few people willing to roll up their sleeves and go to work. Once this nucleus begins to exert effort, it will begin to show some successes. Then this nucleus needs to expand to include more and more of the community until the entire community is involved. But the work is not on big jobs; it is on small ones that can be achieved quickly. The big ones come later after Rawlins has seen the results of the smaller and sees that it can accomplish things.

There is a number of short term, accomplishable recommendations that the review team has provided. The most important thing is to get the entire community involved in trying to find ways to accomplish its goals. A few celebrations at the successful conclusion of an activity which has involved a large number of citizens will lead to a feeling of accomplishment that will carry over into other activities. Look through the short-term suggestions, pick out one that you know what you can do, and get started!

Each of you individually must decide what it is that you want to do—what kind of project you want to tackle. There are enough tasks for everyone. Each small step, every accomplishment, no matter how limited, is movement in the right direction toward achieving Rawlins’s goals. It can be done! There is no problem facing Rawlins that cannot be solved by the people living in the community. It is your choice, your decision, you can do it.

On behalf of the Rawlins Resource Team, I want to thank the community and our sponsors, the Rawlins Chamber of Commerce and the town of Rawlins for the warm hospitality shown to us during our stay. The meals and accommodations were outstanding. We heard over and over in the listening sessions that Rawlins was filled with warm, caring individuals and we certainly can attest to that! Thank you very much.

We hope you will find great value in this report and remember any team member is available for you to call to clarify information or provide more information and assistance.

Sincerely,

Cindy Garettson-Weibel, Team Leader

Recommendations Submitted by Resource Team Members

The Resource Team has provided the community of Rawlins with many suggestions. For the most part, we tried not to repeat too many suggestions by team members, but on occasion, a suggestion may be included in more than one team member’s report. We have listed the individual recommendations, along with contact information. In addition to the contact listed, we encourage you to communicate directly with any team member whose recommendation you decide to implement. This document is provided as a reference guide, now it is up to the community to act upon the recommendations. Special appreciation goes to City Clerk Marla Brown, who served as a recorder at all the listening sessions, and to Ron Kilgore, Director of Community Development for Rawlins, who coordinated the logistics for the assessment.

Introduction
I appreciated the opportunity to participate in the community assessment for Rawlins. As we toured around town the first day of the assessment, I was impressed with the community and the perception that I had of Rawlins changed dramatically (for the better). Rawlins has many beautiful parks and an excellent infrastructure that lends itself to some great facilities. The people were identified as an asset at every listening session, and I would encourage the community to take advantage of this in implementing these suggestions. I have provided suggestions below, categorized by the major themes identified at the listening sessions. In addition to the suggestions that have been provided, I encourage you to look at other community assessments that have been done. They can be accessed through the Wyoming Community Network web site: www.wyomingcommunitynetwork.com

I appreciate the hospitality the community offered the assessment team, and I hope the following recommendations that I offer will be beneficial.

Beautification:

Challenge: While the community recognized that much has been done in this area, more clean-up was still needed. Areas specifically identified included the corrals, vacant houses and the East end of Cedar Street. This is a difficult situation, because most people believe in private property rights, but at the same time want the community, as a whole, to look its best. The challenge is to instill community pride among all citizens.

Solution/Contact: Community clean-up days can continue to be utilized. Because the youth seem to be willing to participate in this area, I would recommend applying for a Wyoming Youth and Community (WYAC) grant, through the Rural Rehabilitation Program, managed by the Wyoming Business Council. The WYAC grant program provides student organizations with a grant up to $1,500 to improve the facilities, grounds or buildings on public property in Wyoming communities. Promotion

Challenge: With Interstate 80 going right by Rawlins, a number of people mentioned that they would like to be able to pull tourists off the highway. Many people also indicated that they would like to overcome the poor image of Rawlins that is often perceived because it is a “prison town.”

Solution/Contact: Better signage along the Interstate, and even development of a town slogan will help promotional efforts. One quote from a listening session participant really caught my attention, “Rawlins is isolation at its best.” A contest for a town slogan that projects a positive image would be easy to implement, and the town could even vote on it to continue the community spirit. Combined with the various recreational opportunities available in Rawlins and the development of the new golf course, a number of opportunities for tourism promotion exist. Leadership Training

Challenge: While citizens admitted that a good volunteer network exists in Rawlins, they felt that leadership training was needed to make community leaders more responsive to citizens’ concerns.
Solution/Contact: The Wyoming Association of Municipalities provides training to elected officials during their annual convention each summer and at other times during the year. Training is provided in a number of topics, including: communication, media relations, conflict resolution/management, decision making, ethics and integrity, strategic planning, leadership principles, financial management, and human resource management. This is a great opportunity for elected leaders to increase their leadership skills. Even the most seasoned leader can benefit from this professional development training. Solution/Contact: The Agribusiness Division of the Wyoming Business Council, in partnership with the Wyoming Agricultural Leadership Council, sponsors an adult leadership program for agricultural producers. The 18-month program has been in existence since the 1980s and consists of 12 seminars. Topics include: team building, niche marketing, financing options, time management, economic diversification, federal land policy, farm programs, media message development, understanding the legislative process, state water issues, Wyoming fiscal policies, business planning, effective listening, estate and tax planning, emerging energy issues, coordinated resource management, foreign trade issues, exporting, and other emerging agricultural issues. The program includes a one-week study trip to Washington, D.C. and an international study tour. Class VII is currently underway, and the next class will begin in the fall of 2003. Solution/Contact:
A number of Chambers of Commerce around the state sponsor community leadership programs. The format of these programs vary somewhat from community to community, so I would recommend soliciting information from a number of these programs if the community is interested in establishing such a training program. This is a great opportunity for citizens from all sectors of the community to be better acquainted with all economic sectors. For further information, contact:

Economic Development

Challenge: Lack of a diversified economy in Rawlins was a strong theme at every listening session, as well as lack of middle wage jobs. Outmigration of youth is common in communities across Wyoming. Entrepreneurial training for existing business owners was identified as a need in the community, as well. The following solutions may help address some of these issues.

Solution/Contact: A few people mentioned that they would like to seem some light manufacturing in the community. This seems like an excellent opportunity for the community, with the easy access to transportation. Several programs exist that could help an enterprise develop a manufacturing component. The Mid-America Manufacturing Technology Center (MAMTC) has offices in 20 communities in Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming. MAMTC provides low cost, hands-on consulting to improve profitability and business performances, and has several engineers on staff to help provide technical assistance to businesses. Solution/Contact: Entrepreneurial training for business owners, as well as owners of start-up businesses are important and can help strengthen the viability of the business community. The Wyoming Small Business Development Center (SBDC) assists business owners in business planning, marketing, accounting and financial assistance, grant preparation, and a host of other topics. SBDC provides free, personalized consulting services for businesses, and offers, for a fee, a 12-week training program for new or existing businesses. For further information contact,

Solution/Contact: Another program that offers assistance to small businesses to develop their products is the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) program, which is a federal research and development program specifically for small businesses. Through the SBIR program, 10 federal agencies provide more than $1 billion in research and development funding annually. Benefits of the program include: 1. The SBIR program can provide start up funding for research based small businesses; 2. Small businesses can develop innovative new commercial products or services using SBIR funds; 3. Entrepreneurial researchers can use the SBIR program to start small businesses; and 4. The SBIR program can be used to facilitate the transfer of university research to small businesses. Thank you for the opportunity to listen to residents and lend advice on projects that you spoke to the team about during our assessment in Rawlins in September. Although we were unable to hear from everyone in your community, those who participated exemplified great community spirit and shared with us many unique ideas on ways to improve the image of Rawlins. It is apparent that most of you are proud of and appreciate your community; you just need the right tools to show others what is so special about Rawlins. We hope our resources help you to achieve your goals and we look forward to keeping in touch. Remember – we are just here as resources and to lend advice, the success of this assessment is in your capable hands. Good luck!

Business Recruitment and Expansion- An ongoing concern for all communities in Wyoming is the ability to recruit businesses to our area. Attendees to the listening sessions specifically mentioned an interest in recruiting light manufacturing companies. Equally as important is the need for business retention and expansion. To better understand additional needs of the community, the Chamber could conduct a survey highlighting items and services that are currently in demand by residents but are not available locally. This information can serve as a valuable tool for community members who can fill those gaps or may inform some of a need to improve advertising for some products that are already available. Economic Diversification - The need to diversify the economy was mentioned several times. Assistance in improving the skills of the Rawlins workforce will enhance your ability to attract high-tech companies and companies with specialized needs.

The Internet Masters Program sponsored by University of Wyoming Cooperative Extension and the Wyoming Rural Development Council will provide 30 hours of intense Internet training to interested participants. These training classes are scheduled throughout the state. The cost of the course is only $90 and the classes have received great evaluations. For information on the next Internet Masters class contact the following:

Continue Technology Training - use those trained in the Internet Masters Program to train others in Rawlins to extend this training opportunity to all that are interested.

Work with the Wyoming Community Network to help in your community development initiatives. The network is up and running and has been developed to help in your community development projects. The network has a database of resources and will help to connect communities with the resources that are needed to reach your community development goals. During the listening sessions, we heard numerous mentions of the need for local retail competition and the need to attract new businesses to Rawlins. Start a Rawlins business challenge program. This is a business competition that can be tailored to existing business or to a start-up business. The program utilizes cash and in-kind donations to assist businesses. The chart below demonstrates the far-reaching impact this program can have on a new or existing business. For more information on this program, contact:

The Economic Development Administration has technical assistance grants that allow for finance feasibility studies and other projects leading to local economic development. Description: A compilation of 109 economic development success stories drawn from communities of less than 10,000 population. Each 3-5 page case study explains why, when, how, with whom and with which financial resources the small community achieved its economic development results. Thriving profiles of successes in retaining, expanding, creating or attracting businesses, through a variety of community and economic development strategies. Consider a “Clean-Up” Project on East Cedar street. Get your high school student council involved in the project or other student organizations. You might also consider involving the students in a fundraising project to raise funds to purchase “Welcome to Rawlins” signs for each community entrance location. Perhaps the students can have a design contest that focuses on promoting the downtown Rawlins area. The Chamber, City, etc. might offer a cash prize or scholarship to the winner with the best design. The Greater Cheyenne Chamber of Commerce worked to get the welcome sign for Cheyenne that is located on I-25 and has offered to answer any questions if needed.

III. Facilities

Telecommunications Misperceptions - As I mentioned in the town meeting, there are plenty of misperceptions about telecommunications services in Rawlins. Many of these were mentioned during the listening sessions. The one that continued to be mentioned was the misperception that there is not a fiber optic backbone connecting Rawlins to the world. Qwest has served Rawlins over our digital fiber network since the 80's. Just a few months ago, Qwest agreed to make an additional high-speed data service, ATM, available to Rawlins customers. Although ATM service is generally a service that is used by large businesses with diverse needs for teleconferencing, data and voice lines, there are other services available by Qwest and other providers. If you have additional questions, I can refer you to the appropriate marketing and sales personnel. Don’t let misperceptions create a negative image about Rawlins and hurt your ability to compete for high-tech businesses.

IV. Leadership

Many listening session participants expressed a need for leadership training. The following resources could assist Rawlins in filling this need and in training your community activists who are interested in making a difference:
Leadership Technical Service (LTS), a board of the Wyoming Association of Municipalities, has a listing of communities currently sponsoring leadership programs. Contact them to receive a list of those communities and the variety of programs offered.

The Greater Cheyenne Chamber of Commerce has sponsored Leadership Cheyenne for many years and has developed a strong base of graduates that learn about the community, volunteer organizations and ways to become a civic trustee. The program is a great tool for organizing leadership groups that can work together on major projects that will benefit Rawlins.

Begin a Youth Leadership Program. This type of program would build and create future leaders who will perhaps stay in Rawlins or return to Rawlins after college to serve the community:

V. People

Involv community members in community development by increasing the number of qualified and experienced grant writers in Rawlins. Ask local businesses or organizations to sponsor these individuals by paying for their training. In return, these trained grant writers give back to the community by researching and applying for funding for community projects. The following grant writing workshop has proven to be very successful:

Bi-Annual Resource, Conservation & Development grant writing workshop. This workshop is considered to be one of the best grant writing schools in the region.

Youth Activities and Programs - We heard repeatedly from the students, there is nothing to do after school and that drug abuse is a problem in Rawlins. The following is a well-respected program that serves as a mechanism for occupying students’ time after school and also providing educational opportunities to combat drug and substance abuse. The 21st Century Community Learning Centers (CLC) program enables schools to stay open longer, providing a safe place for homework centers, intensive mentoring in basic skills, drug and violence prevention counseling, helping middle school students to prepare to take college prep courses in high school, enrichment in the core academic subjects as well as opportunities to participate in recreational activities, chorus, band and the arts, technology education programs and services for children and youth with disabilities.

Integration of youth into community activities - As with most communities in Wyoming, Rawlins is struggling with the continued out migration of youth. There is a general consensus that there are not enough high paying jobs in your community to keep or attract young adults to stay in your community.

Consider selecting (or allowing the students to select) a junior representative to serve on a few community boards. (Chamber, Rawlins Downtown Development Authority, etc.). This representative should have a teacher sponsor who can support them and assist them in reporting their board activities back to the students through a school newsletter or through school civic clubs. This youth representative should also speak on behalf of the students and should work to link school/community activities and goals together.

Create a job-shadowing program for youth to travel to Cheyenne during the legislative session to witness first hand the daily activities of the Carbon County elected officials. Developing this program through the high school will help to engage youth in the importance of becoming active in their community and in opportunities for a future in public office. The Wyoming Business Alliance sponsors a job-shadowing program with the Wyoming Legislature.

VII. Projects

There were several mentions of various capital projects such as sidewalk repair, curb repair, and an assisted living facility. Below are potential funding sources for the various capital projects that were mentioned:
The Community Development Block Grant program (CDBG) is a federal program that is administered by the Wyoming Business Council. There are three objectives, one of which your project should meet:

1) benefit to low and moderate income families
2) elimination of slum and blight
3) meet an urgent community development need that impacts the health and safety of the community.

HEALTH AND SOCIAL SERVICES
Challenge: Health care practitioner recruitment and retention is an ongoing challenge for Rawlins medical treatment providers. Hospital and private professionals struggle with trying to meet increasing demands for health care while staffing levels are falling below optimal, or even minimal, coverage levels. Burnout begins to take its toll. Potential new employees and existing staff can obtain work elsewhere for significantly higher pay with fewer demands on their time. Youth are unaware of the opportunities for work in health care professions and may not value the work done by physicians, mid-levels, and nurses and other allied health professionals.

Solution: Wyoming Health Resources Network, Inc., (WHRN) is a public-private partnership formed about six years ago to address the state’s health care practitioner shortages. WHRN is a nonprofit charging nominal fees for provision of technical assistance with recruitment of physicians, locum tenens physicians (short-term provision of care), physician assistants, nurse practitioners and allied health professionals.

WHRN is working with its partners – including the Wyoming Department of Health, Wyoming Hospital Association, Wyoming Medical Society, Wyoming Nurses Association, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, and the University of Wyoming – on examination of the nursing and allied health professional shortage in Wyoming and determination of solutions for an escalating need for a new crop of health professionals. WHRN’s first recruitment and retention training seminar was offered in 2001 to Wyoming communities in need of technical assistance with ongoing recruitment challenges. For more information about WHRN’s recruitment and retention program, call WHRN’s health professional recruitment coordinator:

VOLUNTEERISM/COMMUNITY PARTICIPATION
Challenge: The mobilization of community resources – cash contributions, volunteers, identification and utilization of existing programs and professionals – arises as a challenge in Rawlins. While people report an excellent volunteer network exists and that people can be called upon to serve when there is a need, there also is a perception that many volunteers still are needed in some nonprofit circles. Grants, contributions, and ongoing support for services benefiting the poor, elderly, disabled, and children and youth also were cited as being lacking. There is a frustration among health and social service professionals attempting to provide services and support to consumers that what is needed simply does not exist in the community, other programs are duplicating their efforts, referrals to their programs are not made, and people in need of their services do not seek out the help available.

Solution: In Buffalo, Wyoming, a Community Resource Center was created to address a broad range of health and social service issues, including (but not limited to) volunteerism, employment, health and social service information and referral, community health planning, Healthy Communities/Healthy Youth initiatives, Community Service Block Grant funding (distributed across the state to address poverty) and tobacco use prevention.

Here’s how it works: Anyone can call a toll-free “help line” (during normal business hours) that is answered by Community Resource Center staff. People who want to volunteer, who need work, who need help finding health and social service programs and personnel most likely to meet their needs, or who want to collaborate with other nonprofit and government entities in the community can get answers from the Community Resource Center staff regarding where to go, who to talk to, and what they can expect.

The Community Resource Center utilizes the Connect Wyoming database, collaborates with the Department of Employment and the Department of Health, and receives public and private grants to operate. For more information, call:

Challenge: There is a perception among some professionals in Rawlins working to address health and social service issues that there is a need for better communication among service providers, more coordination and collaboration, and general unification around a greater number of pressing concerns.

Solution: The Community Resource Council of Carbon County is a large group of health and social service providers that has been meeting in Rawlins for several years. The CRC is a nonprofit organization with 501(c)3 tax status and may apply for and accept grant monies. Currently, the CRC has Carbon County’s tobacco use prevention funds and is working with the Wyoming Department of Health on alleviating the impact of tobacco use in the county through prevention and intervention. Within the last two years, the CRC also has become part of an effort in eight Wyoming communities to improve and promote health coalition work, advance hospital telemedicine capacity, and build collaboration among medical providers. A grant obtained by Livanon Memorial Hospital in Laramie is providing funding for coalition encouragers at eight hospitals (including Carbon County Memorial), telemedicine technology, and special projects. The CRC is working on a community resource directory update and other objectives. CRC “encourager” and coordinator Susan Barnes (also a Rawlins Town Councilman), is employed by Carbon County Memorial and can be reached for more information at:

COMMUNITY RESOURCES
Challenge: Rawlins residents would like their town to be a cleaner, prettier place to visit and live in, but feel mired in weeds surrounding inhabitable and dilapidated buildings. Youth complain that there is not enough to do. Seniors want storm drains cleaned so that water runs off properly. Complaints are being lodged that there are too many meetings and too little action regarding the beautification needed in town – people complain but do nothing to fix what they say is broken.

Solution: How much work could be accomplished if for one day, every one in town contributed their time, money and supplies to cleaning the place up – regardless of who owns the land and whose responsibility it is to do the work? Children and youth, adults and seniors together working on cleaning storm sewers, painting the homes of shut ins and the elderly and disabled, pulling and spraying weeds, planting trees and flowers, picking up trash, washing windows and sweeping sidewalks could create sense of community spirit, increase community pride, get cardiovascular health-improving exercise and make a difference in the way the community looks. Business people unable to close their shops for the day could donate food and beverages for the workers, supplies, and employee time. Grants could be obtained to support the larger projects, such as planting partially-grown trees, painting houses, and hauling off large pieces of junk. Sheridan has had two volunteer days at which more than 600 people worked on a variety of projects. For more information, call:

Paint Your Heart Out is a program utilized in Casper to help seniors and shut ins get their homes painted, improving neighborhoods and the self esteem of people without the means to keep their living spaces attractive. Businesses contribute their employees for a day to help paint with donated paint. Houses are chosen from a waiting list. Sometimes Paint Your Heart Out becomes a nonprofit organization that operates all year long and solicits contributions on an ongoing basis for home improvement; in California, Paint Your Heart Out has been expanded to also serve as Build Your Heart Out (constructing new homes). Arbor Day celebrations are promoted nationally to encourage tree planting as a school activity, opportunity to leave a living memorial, and continue the legacy of tree-lined communities. Rawlins trees were cited as one of its primary attributes, and new trees have been planted along sections of the new walking path; however, new trees are quite small and will require years to mature. Ongoing tree planting will result in well-developed greenery in the future. For more information, visit the National Arbor Day web site:

http://www.arborday.org/

Sometimes community volunteerism efforts can be coordinated using federal funds. The programs available in Wyoming include Americorps, which provides stipends and educational benefits to people who commit themselves exclusively to community service for a year or longer. EDUCATION/COMMUNITY CENTERS

Challenge: Youth and adults alike complain the shopping choices in Rawlins are limited, prices are out of reach and/or unreasonable a discount house such as Sam’s Club or Wal Mart and/or more retail competition would result in greater choice and at lower cost, and there are too many unoccupied store fronts downtown waiting for new retail stores. Youth complain they don’t have enough elective course choices in school, there are not the kind of jobs in the community that are needed to keep them in town, and they need places to hang out. There is no youth treatment program, youth crisis center or youth detention facility in Rawlins. The need for those kinds of facilities will decrease if there are greater opportunities for youth to be engaged in meaningful activities resulting in self esteem, self responsibility and healthy relationships with peers and adults.

Solution: In the mid-90s, the Casper Chamber of Commerce launched a Shop Casper First! Campaign aimed at generating support for local merchants rather than using the internet or going to neighboring large cities to shop. The idea is that by supporting local merchants, goodwill results and merchants will be more inclined to stock specialty items, will be able to lower prices and will feel valued and appreciated. People who shop at home and who insist on working with merchants to get what they need at a reasonable price send a powerful message that they have pride in their community. Dollars spent at home are recycled in the community. If stores are not locally owned, their leadership can still be encouraged to make gifts to nonprofit efforts, allow their employees days off (paid) to work on civic projects, and make shopping as consumer-friendly as possible. For more information about the Shop Casper First! campaign, call the Casper Area Chamber of Commerce:

(307) 234-5311
Solution: In some communities, youth are given the opportunity to build houses or create or take over the operation of businesses. With mentoring from local businesspeople and contractors, students learn real world skills while making a difference in their communities. In Rawlins, students could (as a class project or after school “club” activity for extra credit, income or community service hours) create and operate a Welcome Wagon program, open an after school café where they prepare and serve the food eaten at their hangout (for a price), open and operate a bakery, learn to care for younger children after school in local elementary schools (with supervision – an after school program for kids run by older kids), and teach their parents and seniors to use the internet and computers in labs at local schools after school and on weekends (for extra credit, or community service hours). Student creativity can be tapped in the classroom and after school to make the community a more “kid friendly” place where youth will choose to stay because the new businesses will generate opportunities for them to learn and hone their skills and potentially own businesses of their own. Schools also could be used during the evening and on weekends for play practices and to plan and stage cultural activities starring residents of all ages and attracting local and tourist attention.

The Urban-Rural Opportunity Grants Program (UROG) of the National School-to-Work Office forms partnerships in high poverty areas and develops strategies to address the multiple needs of in-school and out-of-school youth, including human service needs. Challenge: No shelter in Rawlins for homeless people.

Solution: In Cheyenne and numerous other small communities across the country, a project called the Interfaith Hospitality Network is creating housing for homeless children and their parents while long-term sustainability is created through case management and social services. In Cheyenne, more than 20 families have found permanent housing in less than a year, after spending a few weeks in the Interfaith Hospitality Network. Families sleep in local churches (rotating to a different church each week, with folding beds and donated linens trailered from church to church) where parishioners provide overnight supervision, meals, transportation, and support. The families spend their days looking for work, homes, and going to school, with help from a full-time social worker. Cheyenne is operating its program for about $50,000 annually, nine participating churches, and in-kind contributions (office space, shower facilities, recreation) from the YMCA. Introduction

I have visited the City of Rawlins frequently over the past several years. I now have a new perspective of the community. The parks, the recreation and medical facilities, the schools, the senior center, the emergency response personnel and the other many assets came as a pleasant surprise to me, however, the one asset that I heard so often throughout the listening sessions is the people of the community, their willingness to give of their time for the good of the community and their fellow citizens. I sincerely appreciated the wonderful hospitality afforded us throughout the assessment process.

Challenge

Two concerns that we heard was that the local financial institutions are reluctant to provide loans to small businesses, and that there are few financial options open to women.

Solution

The Wyoming Challenge Loan Program is a useful tool that businesses can use to encourage the local banks to participate with the Wyoming Business Council. Ben Avery, Portfolio/Loan Manager, Wyoming Business Council is able to partner with the local bank for a maximum loan of $250,000, and he can participate up to 35% of the loan to a qualified business. The minimum interest rate on the WBC portion is 4%. This often is attractive to the local banker, because he is usually participating in up to half of the loan request. The Challenge Loan may also reduce the overall interest rate due to the blending of the bank’s rate and the state’s rate.

A Community Development Block Grant Convertible Loan is available to for-profit businesses through Steve Achter, Investment Ready Communities Director, Wyoming Business Council. Local governments may apply on behalf of the business for loans up to $150,000. The loan is converted to a grant at a rate of $500 per job created. The interest rate and term of the loan will be comparable to bank interest rates and terms.

For more information contact Tom Johnson, South East Regional Director, Wyoming Business Council, 1400 E. College Drive, Cheyenne, WY 82007-3298 or call (307) 635-7735.
In addition, other options may be available to women by contacting Wyoming Women's Business Center, P.O. Box 3464, Laramie, WY 82070 or call (307) 766-3084.

Challenge

Concerns were voiced regarding the workforce and the lack of training available for the various industries.

Solution

Local governments may apply for grants under the Community Development Block Grant Job Training Program. Grants under this program provide job training to for-profit entities that can demonstrate the need for specially trained employees in their workplace. Contact Steve Achter, (307) 777-2811 or Tom Johnson, South East Regional Director, Wyoming Business Council (307) 635-7735.

The Wyoming Business Council and the Wyoming Community College Commission have joined in a partnership with the State of Georgia to help improve workforce development programs in Wyoming. The program called Quick Start is a nationally recognized training program for new or expanding businesses, and the following programs will be available for use in Wyoming:

- Certified Customer Service Specialist - training for service, hospitality, retail and other service industries in which customer contact is a vital operation.

- Certified Manufacturing Specialist - helps provide manufacturing companies with skills employees need, from business principles to plant safety.

- Certified Warehousing & Distribution Specialist - provides workers new levels of skill and ingenuity in warehousing and distribution.

A new program is being developed to the needs of the oil and gas extraction industries, and will be available in the near future. For more information contact Peter Reis, Chief Support Officer, Wyoming Business Council at (307) 777-2822.

In partnership with the Wyoming Business Council, the Wyoming Department of Employment administers applications for training grants. The grants help new and existing industries meet their training needs.

- The grant may be awarded if an employer is creating new jobs in the state through business expansion or relocation from another state.
• Costs that may be reimbursed include expenses directly related to the training; i.e., instructors' fees, materials, travel expense workshop fees, etc.

• A job in Wyoming must exist or will at the end of the training program. The job must be filled by a participant in the program.

• Training grants can range up to a maximum of $2000 per trainee.

For more information on the grant application process contact Tom Johnson at (307) 625-7735 or go to the Workforce Development Training Fund web site at: wydoe.state.wy.us.

Challenge

The lack of retail selection, service and inconvenient store hours was viewed as a problem in the listening sessions.

Solution

These problems are not exclusive to Rawlins. Many communities in Wyoming have or have had similar retail experiences.

Retail selection is many times a difficult problem to solve, because small communities are usually unable to attract large retail chains that provide a greater selection of merchandise. However, some communities have improved their selection by demonstrating that they will support the local merchant if he or she does expand the product lines. Most retailers keep good records, and they are well aware of what sells and what does not. Many retailers maintain a product request list. If an item has several inquiries, they will usually add that item to the product line. Your local chamber of commerce is a good contact point to begin your efforts.

Customer service is also a common complaint in small communities. Many programs have been developed to address the issue.

One program that has been very successful is the Mystery Shopper Program. The retailers are informed that at sometime, unknown to the retailer, a mystery shopper will come into the establishment, make a purchase, and later return the merchandise. The mystery shopper prepares a report regarding the shopping experience and service. The report is then given to the store owner or manager. The program can be tailored to any service, public or private. This and other programs such as the Wyoming Hospitality Program are available by contacting Bill Ellis, Region 1 Director, Wyoming Small Business Development Center, 1400 Dewar Drive, Suite 205, Rock Springs, WY 82901 or call (800) 348-5205.

The University of Wyoming offers merchandising and customer service seminars for retailers, and will conduct them in your area upon request. Contact Tex Taylor at the University of Wyoming or coordinate the request through your local chamber of commerce.

Another program called Wyoming Welcome is available to train retail clerks about customer service. If you have a School to Careers program in your high school, the course is offered at no cost to the retailer. The retailers are usually required to grant an interview to the students who complete the course. For more information contact the Director of the Rawlins Chamber of Commerce or Janet Hartford at (307) 875-5711.

In some communities the consumer working in conjunction with the local chamber of commerce or retail merchant's association have been successful in getting the retail stores to maintain store hours during the normal lunch and after normal work hours to allow the working population the opportunity to shop. Retailers who have tried this in other communities throughout Wyoming have found that the extended hours significantly increased their business. Again this should be coordinated through the Rawlins Chamber of Commerce.

Challenge

There is only one major grocery store in Rawlins. Consequently, prices are much higher than the surrounding communities that enjoy two or more competitive grocery stores. We heard that families can realize savings of several hundreds of dollars per year by driving to other communities, however, these folks are concerned about the risks of driving the highways, especially in inclimate weather.

Solution

Two other communities on the I-80 corridor, Green River and Lyman, are experiencing similar problems. The lack of local competition means longer lines at the check out and product prices that range from 50 to 100 percent higher than in the communities who enjoy the competition of two or more stores.

In the communities of Green River and Lyman, the citizens have appealed to the local governments and economic development associations to actively recruit on additional store. Because of the close proximity of your communities and the I-80 access that each of your communities have in common, I would suggest that you encourage your local governments and economic development groups to join with Green River and Lyman to attract a chain or large independent grocery operation that will serve the three communities. Janet Hartford, Director, Green River Chamber of Commerce (307) 875-5711 and Oliver "Butch" Moretti, Mayor of Lyman (307) 787-6595 have been spearheading the efforts for those two communities.

Challenge

We heard the need to recruit medium size businesses and industries that offer pay scales between the lower paying penitentiary and service jobs and the high paying railroad and refinery jobs.
Solution

Economic Development is a process, and recruitment of new businesses and industries requires hard work, patience and persistence. It also requires a unified effort. So often in small communities economic development efforts become fragmented because the different entities with the community or county work against each other rather than in a unified, cooperative effort.

The Wyoming Economic Development Association (WEDA) along with the Wyoming Business Council is making an aggressive, concerted effort to recruit business and industry into the state. When a business indicates an interest to locate in Wyoming, those leads, as they are called, are sent to the local economic development groups and the chambers of commerce. The Wyoming Business Council commissioned Deloitte and Touche LLC to conduct a study of the entire state, and to recommend the types of businesses and industries that would be best suited for the Wyoming business climate. The WBC has been actively recruiting based on those recommendations. A copy of the study can obtained from Tom Johnson, South East Regional Director, whose address and telephone number has been referenced several times above.

Many times the infrastructure is not in place in the smaller communities to accommodate a medium or large size business interested in relocating in the state. Many communities have an industrial or business park available, however, those parks may not have adequate infrastructure to attract the types of business the types of businesses they desire to have locate in the community. PacifiCorp and the Wyoming Business Council can provide an independent engineering study to identify the strengths and weaknesses of your area designated or zoned for light or heavy industrial use, and will provide a document that can be used for recruitment as well as providing your local governments with solid recommendations for the industrial park needs.

Because a request for an industrial site evaluation requires the approval of the Wyoming Business Council and PacifiCorp, you should contact Tom Johnson, South East Regional Director, Wyoming Business Council, 1400 E. College Drive, Cheyenne, WY 82007-3298, (307) 635-7735 and Rod Fisher, Regional Community Manager, PacifiCorp, 415 N Street, Rock Springs, WY 82901, (307)352-5202.
WHAT WAS SAID IN THE INTERVIEWS

The Resource Team spent 3 days interviewing local residents to hear what they had to say. Those being interviewed were directed to answer three questions:

What are the major problems and challenges in your community?
What are the major strengths and assets of your community?
What projects would you like to see implemented in your community in the next two, five, ten or twenty years?

We have listed below, without comment, what we heard from those who volunteered to be interviewed.

1. What are the major problems and challenges in your community?

Identifying what Rawlins actually is – lacking in coordinating of marketing Rawlins
Like to have more jobs – but not actually having enough work forces
Building a strong retail community
Image: outside looking in instead of inside looking out
Putting laws into effect vs. implementing applying the law without alienating the community
Future growth with a permanent job base – housing being too expensive renovation vs. tearing it down
Water is an issue, acquisition and use of surface water rights – water development, not artesian water
Instability of State Pen long term planning with employment
Change is not easy
Image problem with other cities of the state
Middle range jobs lacking
State Pen administrative jobs are in Cheyenne – better serve our community if they live in Rawlins
Does not bring any travelers off the highway into our community
Aesthetics of Rawlins
Enticing industry to Rawlins and employment
City keeping big corporations out of town
Negativism in the community
Fiber optics, get it in town
Grass is greener on the other side mentality in Rawlins
Shop, go out of town
Tries to buy locally first, competition for groceries
Lack of coordination of our community “good old boy syndrome”
Some groups are incestuous and stays there
Poor customer service
Not good selections of goods
Not treated right
Stores are not accessible
Lack of leadership training
Wild life control in Rawlins (squirrels)
Economy poor
Equal enforcement of ordinances (perception that some ordinances that police go after certain things and ignore others)
Excellent groups of citizens identifying problems and no support of the financial end of the community
Stable work force needs stable childcare systems (24-hour care, infant care, general shortage)
Economic development money will not be spent on childcare development
Businesses do not provide the goods here
No kid’s crisis center
No juvenile detention facility, sent out of community
WSP leadership not committed to working with the community
No youth center or facility different than the Rec Center for teenagers
Lack of resources
Access to capital funds, difficult for people to get
Cultural activities brought to town has lack of citizen participation
Little community action
Slow economic growth
More improvement with the school district
Teenage pregnancy, drinking and nothing to do outside of the school
Economy
Little teen activities except sports
Ditto
Ditto
Not enough stores and prices are too high
Nothing to do and lack of stores
See more class choices at the high school
Need more new jobs
Better economy
Not enough jobs
Ditto
